The American People Are Waiting!

As the November general election nears, week after week the American people are waiting for current national leaders and national candidates to outline how they plan to work with private sector businesses to expand America's industries. I say, PRIVATE SECTOR BUSINESSES because, Private Sector Businesses are the most important way to address America's economy and the 29 million businesses presently operating in the U.S.A. would provide a source for millions of additional job possibilities if addressed properly.

After more than 30 years of watching industries grow around the world, Americans need leaders with plans, not just talk. If the individuals seeking our votes in November placed as much effort in demonstrating how they would restore America's jobs and economy as they are downgrading the other candidates, we would better understand their qualifications and how they could help bring about positive change in the U.S.A.

One very important way to help the cause of American workers is to seek out the products and services they provide. The key issue is not who owns the company, but how many Americans they employ. So as you go shopping, look for, ask for, and purchase as many items as possible with a made in the U.S.A. label.
