Our Participation Helps America's Independence!

After seeing what has happened to America's workforce, economy and educational system in the last few decades, I'm sure that we all agree that Americans need to focus on the well-being of America FIRST.

As we mark the 248th Anniversary of America's Declaration of Independence and recall the principles that inspired the July 4, 1776 document, let's refocus on rebuilding America by restoring jobs, job skills and revitalizing America's economy.

The 248th Anniversary of America's Independence is an opportunity for us to consider the importance of the United States Constitution, a document that governs the relationship of the federal government with individual states, and the American people. The United States Constitution is not an instrument to restrain the American people; it is an instrument for the people to restrain the government from dominating our lives and best interests.

When we look at the thousands of businesses that left America with very little reaction from America's national elected leaders, we can say they did not deliver on what they promised when they were sworn into office to look out for the well-being of the American people and the future of America. Instead, they allowed thousands of businesses to outsource manufacturing to foreign countries. These products were invented and traditionally made in America for more than a century. We see they did not bring America's businesses owners together to find every way possible for them to remain in the United States. Because of their lack of action for over 35 years, America lost tens-of-millions of employment opportunities needed to maintain the quality of life for American workers and their families, which also benefits America's economy.

As we celebrate America's Independence Day, I urge you to seek out and purchase products made, distributed, sold, and serviced by American workers and invite your family and friends to do the same.
